Wall

All natural stone has variations in colour and movement. Patternations and shades may vary from the samples supplied.

Common Marble Visual Characteristics:

Burgundy: A dramatic, deep cherry-red characterised by bold, contrasting white calcite veins that create a striking, high-movement pattern.

Red: A vibrant terracotta to deep crimson stone displaying prominent linear layering and a porous, pitted surface common of travertine.

Beige: Features a tan palette distinguished by a unique linear pitted texture and horizontal "river-like" banding caused by natural mineral deposits.

Cream: A warm ivory base featuring a consistent scatter of tiny fossilised fragments and subtle, earthy speckling.

Grey: A contemporary light-to-mid grey that is uniform with fine-graining, occasional small fossilised fragments and subtle taupe undertones.

White: Presents a bright white base accented by soft, flowing diagonal veins in shades of light grey or subtle burgundy, evoking a cloud-like appearance.

Jade: Displays a soft, translucent seafoam to mint green, often scattered with small white crystalline structures and delicate, pale veining.

Black: A sophisticated jet-black marble punctuated by crisp, irregular white lightning-bolt veins - classic marble with a high-contrast aesthetic.

Green: Features a deep, forest-green backdrop dominated by an intricate web of dark green to black veins, resembling lush tropical foliage.
